History

Founded in 1906, as a district agricultural school the institution advanced to become a teacher's college then a senior college, and in 1990 earned its status as one of the five state universities in Georgia, and the first university in the southern half of the state. Effective January 2018, the University System of Georgia Board of Regents voted to consolidate Armstrong State University and Georgia Southern University. The consolidated university has multiple locations: the main campus in Statesboro, the Armstrong and Hunter Army Airfield campuses in Savannah, and the Liberty and Fort Stewart campuses in Hinesville.
